Athletics in Europe at the Outbreak of War

By ROBERT SIMPSON, Former Coach of Track at the University of Missouri and Iowa State College.

Most European countries—especially Germany, Italy and Hungary—were taking great interest in athletic competition immediately prior to the outbreak of war.

When I went to Europe in 1939 to take charge of preparations of the Hungarian athletes for the 1940 Olympic Games, these countries were continually in competition with one another. They engaged in sports of all sorts except baseball, which they know nothing about. Track and field, football (which is soccer over there), swimming, wrestling, boxing, and skating and skiing in the winter, were included.

The city of Budapest was growing by leaps and bounds. The city was building a large municipal sport center. One building was for wrestling, boxing and tennis, another for their indoor track and other indoor sports.

The Hungarians had men with a lot of experience in timing. They timed very accurately. The closest they measured field events was a centimeter, however. We measure finer than that.

They built a ridge of earth in front of the take-off board in the broad jump, so that a foul was recognized immediately. If a foot touched this ridge on the take-off, it was a foul jump.

Hungarians wet their tracks down so much that they were not capable of making really fast time. They don't know what a fast track is. I tried to convince them that they ought to let the track dry, but it has been a custom for years to wet the track, so they continue in their own way.

They used the sixteen-pound shot in high schools. They did not have the twelve-pound shot at all. I had one seventeen-year-old shot putter who was very well built and one of the best young putters I have ever seen. He put the shot 47 feet.

One night the Hungarians staged a meet under the lights and presented a most unusual exhibition of javelin throwing. A group of throwers lined up and all threw simultaneously. They all threw about 180 feet and the lights shining on the javelins made a beautiful spectacle.

I had the opportunity to see the German track team at Budapest. Some of those boys you have heard about, including Harbig. Harbig at this time had a sore throat, but easily defeated the Hungarians' best man. He really was a great runner.

Christmann, the German coach, had developed a new idea concerning the shot put. He taught his men to pick up the shot in their left hands, move it to the right hand, up against the neck, and then to put with the head down. When putting from the ring, he made them keep the arm and hand low. This was with the exception of one shot putter, who was getting to be an old timer.

Their shot putters did not stand erect. Their knees were slightly bent, shoulders forward. The German coach said he thought he would do seven meters (over 55 feet). He has never done it yet—probably never will.

I was in Italy in the summer of 1939. The Italians have magnificent tracks, as good as in this country, I believe. They have wonderful stadia and usually outside the stadia they have practice tracks.

Comstock, the Italian coach, had a team in 1941 averaging about twenty-three and a half years of age, which was considered unusually young. Ordinarily European teams were composed of much older men. In Hungary the team that was selected for me when I arrived averaged about thirty. They considered that a boy was still a boy until twenty-four years old.

I finally convinced them that if they were ever going to have good athletes they would have to teach the younger boys. When I left I had some pretty good young boys started, although the war interrupted. These boys were in and out of the army so much, they had little chance to train.

One noticeable characteristic of the Europeans was their stamina and endurance, in spite of their mode of living and the food they had to eat. With America's high standard of living, we certainly should be a much stronger, hardier, tougher race. Europeans really do not know what a proper athletic diet is. They could not believe me when I told them about American training habits and food. Their idea of good food is plenty of heavy, highly seasoned, fatty foods.

Practically all competition over there was club competition. They had a little intercollegiate competition, but not to the extent that we have. They are thirty or forty years behind us in most events. Hungarians know little about pole vaulting and high jumping, although I did get some young boys started in these events.

The Hungarians had excellent distance runners. They claim to be cousins of the Finns and have been sending distance men to Finland to study their methods of running. They get workouts twice a day while there, and did more work in each workout than our boys would think of doing. Their athletes could stand a lot of work and did a tremendous amount of it. Moreover, they kept at it up to forty years of age.

It is remarkable that these fellows could be as good as they were, as old as they were, especially under the conditions that existed. For example, training facilities were very poor. We would not think of putting our boys into some of the places that they used for dressing rooms. Oddly enough, there was not a single case of athlete's foot in the country, despite the commonly unsanitary training conditions. Some of the boys had flat feet, but kept right on running.

Athletic programs in Hungary began with formal gymnastics for children in school, at about the same age as in this country. They worked in gymnasiums toward the goal of developing everyone into all-around men and women. They specialized in nothing except military training, which was begun at the age of twelve, and today that specialty is the principal occupation of the athletes of Europe.

The World's Oldest Sport

By K. L. WILSON, Director of Athletics, Northwestern University

A study of track and field athletics can go back several thousand years B.C. Definite records of the ancient Olympic games in Greece prove to us that this is the oldest known sport of all.

A history of the early track and field triumphs of the ancient Greeks is, in reality, a history of civilization. During the centuries in which the Olympic games flourished, and during the times when the people of that early age glorified sports, we find it to be the time of their greatest productivity in the fine arts of music, philosophy, poetry and statesmanship.

The athlete, who was an Olympic champion, was the most honored individual of his city or village. He was first in the councils, he was not asked to pay taxes, and upon his return home from his triumph, a breach was made in the city walls that he might enter in triumph, and songs and poems were written about him.

With the records of the decline in the ancient Olympic games came the

21st Annual N. C. A. A. Championship Meet

University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb., June 12-13, 1942

Southern California ran away from the rest of the field in the 1942 National Collegiate Athletic Association track and field championships, assembling 85½ points through a grand display of team strength. The Trojans took only one first place—by Cliff Bourland in the 440—but their all-around power brought them points in ten of the fourteen events. So great was their power, they got 29 points in the first three events.

Second in team scoring was Ohio State with 44 points, 20 coming on Bob Wright's two victories in the hurdles. California, which finished third, and Ohio State shared one team honor—that of being the only teams to win three first places.

Hal Davis accumulated 20 of California's points with victories in the 100 and the 220. John Biles picked up 10 more for the Bears on a winning javelin toss.

New York University's Leslie MacMitchell was the victim of an upset, when he ran third in the mile behind Bob Ginn of Nebraska and Leroy Weed of Southern California. Other two-year winners who went down to defeat were Barney Ewell, Penn State's champion in the 100 and 220, Hubert Kerns of U.S.C. in the 440 and Campbell Kane of Indiana in the 880.

The only defending champs to retain their titles were Wright in the hurdles and Al Blozis of Georgetown, who won his third straight N.C.A.A. shot-put championship.

For the first time in many years, there were no records set or equaled.

1942 All-American College Track and Field Team

This team was selected by those members of the Track and Field Rules Committee who were present at the Championship Meet at Lincoln, Nebraska. All members of the Committee were urged to send in the best marks made during the year, and these were taken into consideration. It replaces the Honor Roll of previous years and is intended to give more definite recognition to the outstanding collegiate competitors.

THE OFFICIAL NATIONAL COLLEGIATE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION RULES OF TRACK AND FIELD ATHLETICS

Sport in Wartime

It is sport with a purpose during wartime because sport of all kinds helps to (1) keep in good physical condition (2) relax from the stress and strain of wartime living. In our armed forces, sport is important not only for recreation but also for conditioning our fighters to withstand the rigorous life of modern warfare.

The heroic exploits of men who have been athletes in their high school and college days loom high in the annals of war heroism. It is fitting and right that intercollegiate sport and interscholastic sport should continue unabated.

In many instances, sports programs will be accelerated to make it possible for all those who want to play to have that opportunity. We publish books and official guides on practically every sport and will welcome inquiries. If we do not publish the book you want, we will tell you where to obtain it.
