

Jordan sees rosy future for Stanford Relays

Stanford track and field coach Payton Jordan sees a silver lining for the Stanford Relays, revived Saturday as rain clouds shadowed Stanford Stadium.

Jordan says he is already making preliminary plans to stage next year's meet and anticipates an upgrading of the event to where it may eventually rank among the state's better college relays.

"This is a hot spot for a fine relay meet," says Jordan. "We have the stadium, enthusiastic fans and normally good weather to make it one of the best. But it will take some time to develop it."

Jordan said he has had inquiries from such schools as Oregon State and Washington State to compete next year and has given some thought to "beefing up the mile run with a class field."

The relays, previously held from 1960 to 1966, drew 5,000 dampened spectators who sat through occasional rain showers to see six college teams and nine high schools compete in the all-day program.

The university division found Stanford holding a slight edge in the non-scoring affair by winning five events. California won four events, San Jose State three and Hayward State and San Francisco State one each.

The high school division provided an array of close races with Carlmont scoring 27 points to finish ahead of runnerup Los Altos with 23 points for the team title. Woodside was the apparent winner until it was disqualified in the final event, the eight-man mile relay, and had to settle for third place with 21 points.

Referee George Newlon reported Woodside was detected for having "the third handoff out of the zone" in exchanging the baton.

The most impressive relay leg was turned in by Carlmont junior Wyatt Bishop, who played a major role in helping the Scots beat Los Altos 70-66 Thursday to snap the Knights' 64-dual meet win streak.

Bishop covered his 440 anchor leg in the four-man mile relay in 47.3 in almost catching Woodside which won at the wire by three-tenths of a second. Two days earlier on a slow Los Altos track Bishop won the 440 in 50.3 and the 220 in 23.9.

Stanford's all-weather running surface also allowed some other fine times.

The host Cardinals won the 880-yard relay by a full second over Cal with Marvin Holmes (21.7), James Lofton (21.6), Alan Sheats (21.2) and Scott Wingo (21.2) showing the way.

In the shuttle hurdles, also won by Stanford, Foothill College transfer John Foster and Dave Bagshaw were each clocked under 14 seconds for their 120 yards and then joined Reggie Mason and Matt Hogsett to win the mile intermediate hurdle relay.

Stanford's time in the intermediate event was 3:37.0, missing the week-old world record by a half-second set by Occidental, a team that visits Stanford Stadium this Saturday for a dual test with the Cards. Hogsett, the defending Pacific-8 Conference intermediate hurdle champion, had the best leg of the race with a 53.1.

In other dual meets this Saturday, Oregon State will be at Berkeley to face Cal and San Jose travels to San Diego State.
